Relation to class concepts

In a recent lecture named Product Quality and change stewardship we learnt about change management that it is one of the key features of Project management. So, this was helpful in my project as my main goal of the application which was derived from BMI calculator has been shifted. Keeping into mind the People, process and strategy how would my change effect the end user application. The change that I made is overall better for people as they will be able to track their progress. Keeping the functionality of a BMI calculator I will not be taking a feature away from the user. I will just not be highlighting it. During this process I must still link my MVP1 – BMI calculator and my MVP 2 – giving meal plans to the user.